

ISSUED IN PUBLIC INTEREST

Cyber-security firm CrowdStrike has admitted one of its updates has caused an outage, which it said affected Microsoft Windows devices. The boss of global cyber-security firm CrowdStrike, George Kurtz, has said

"This is not a security incident or cyber-attack."

As a result many super markets, flight operations etc have been disrupted.

Though this incident might not be regarded as a cyber-attack, however we caution our customers to exercise safety and discretion and not to click on any random links suggesting remedial action.